Private George Armstrong, Scottish Rifles, Canonbie, died on the 7th inst from diphtheria in hospital. He was wounded last year, and was the eldest son of Mr John Armstrong, merchant, Roadend, Canonbie. He was 19 years of age.

March 18th 1941 Carlisle Journal

On Sunday morning the parents of Miss Eleanor Teresa Armstrong were officially informed by a letter, dated March 12th, that the terrible injuries inflicted upon their daughter by the bomb outrage at the Pera Palace Hotel, Istanbul, had resulted in her death.

At the time of her death Miss Armstrong was the Assistant Private Secretary of Mr George W Rendell, till recently British Minister in Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria. She was a native of Canonbie, and came with her parents about three years ago to live at 24 Scotland Road, Stanwix. She received her business training at the Carlisle Gregg School, where she made herself very popular, being known to her intimates as "Terry." Her abilities and industry resulted in a short but brilliant career, and after her training in the City Treasurer's Office, she left Carlisle to take up a secretarial appointment. Similar appointments followed, till her success in a competitive examination secured her a post on the staff of the International Labour Office of the League of Nations. Twelve months ago she received her important appointment with Mr Rendell.

In Geneva she stayed with a French family, and spoke their language like a native. She was also a fluent speaker of German, and had some knowledge of Spanish. Horse riding as well as walking was one of her favourite pastimes. Her short leaves – too short to enable her to visit her home in Carlisle – were spent at Athens and other resorts on the Continent, some of her travelling being done by air. When at home she was keen on tramping and climbing in the Lake District. She was thirty years of age. She is survived by her mother, three sisters and a brother, with whom the deepest sympathy is felt.

Father of a Bomb Victim

Mr John Armstrong, aged 71, a retired grocer, of Canonbie, who lived at 24 Scotland Rd, Stanwix, was killed near his home this (Friday) morning. He was crossing the road to his house after purchasing a newspaper at about 8.30, and was knocked down by a double decker bus proceeding North. He received severe injuries, which necessitated his removal to the Infirmary, but on arrival there, life was found to be extinct.

Mr Armstrong was the father of Miss E T Armstrong, (assistant confidential secretary to Mr Rendel, the former British Minister in Sofia) who was killed in the bomb outrage at Istanbul last March.

A Recluse's Sad Death - an inquest was held at Longtown, near Carlisle, on Wednesday night, on the body of James Bell, of no occupation, who has lived alone for several years at a house at Longtown, and was killed at a level crossing on the North British Railway near that place on Tuesday, with over £500 in his possession. David Bell, market gardener, Ardrossan, said the deceased was a farm labourer in early life, and went to America, where he made some money. He returned to England eleven years ago. Deceased was peculiar in his manner, and he had known him carry bank notes about with him till they were tattered. Police-Sergeant Sedgwick said the deceased's pocket book contained 24 £20 notes and seven £5 notes, altogether £515. Scattered about the line where deceased was run over was 14s 2d in silver and copper. Deceased was a quiet, inoffensive, steady man, who made no friends. A verdict of accidental death was returned.

July 22nd 1878 The Scotsman

On Friday evening three young women named Grace Ann Whitfield, Hannah Herbertson, both mill-workers, 21 years of age, and Jane Little, went up the Wauchope water for a walk. Herbertson partly undressed and went in to bathe, but got beyond her depth. Whitfield rushed into the water with her clothes on to her assistance, but both sank in a pool. The cries of the other girl were heard by some persons in Wauchope Churchyard, who hastened to the scene. The bodies of the young women were speedily got out, medical aid was sent for, and the usual remedies were resorted to, but without avail, as life was extinct.

October 28th 1898 Carlisle Journal

Mr J B Lee, coroner for East Cumberland, held an inquest on Tuesday at Penton Station on the body of Robert Jardine, foreman surfaceman, aged 52, who was run over by a train and killed on the previous day. It appeared that the deceased, who had been 30 years in the employment of the Company as surfaceman, was with other men lifting the metals and repairing the way about 92 yards west of Penton Station, the day being clear but windy, when a goods train came on the up line. The men stepped aside, and when the train had drawn up to shunt they were returning to work when a fast passenger train came up on the other line and struck the deceased, who was in front of the other men. The goods train was blocking the vision and making a noise; no whistle was heard from the passenger train. John Sloan, the driver of the passenger train from Riccarton, which was going at 40 miles an hour, deposed that he did not see the men until half-way down the platform. He had previously whistled. He saw the deceased the moment before he was run over and at once applied the brake and stopped the train. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death owing to a mistake of the deceased, and handed their fees to the Cumberland Infirmary.
