The following Latin inscription, written in elegant Sapphic verse, is copied from an ancient tombstone in the Church Yard of Dornock:-

Here lyes William Allison late Minister at Dornock, who dyed September 27 Anno Domini 1683 aetatis 63.

Integram vitam, scelerisque puram

Degit, et cordi fuit ore verbum,

A Deo dictum, populo dicare

Nomine Christi

Virtus ast mentis, pietas, honestas,

Non valent, fluxam stabilire vitam:-

Fluxit, a corpus, socia beata

Conditur humo

Sic transit Gloria mundi!

Sacred to the memory of The Rev John ANDERSON DD for 41 years minister of this parish who died at Dornock Manse 29th May 1885 aged 66.

June 5th 1885 Annandale Observer

The announcement which was made in the greater part our issue of last week of the sudden death of the Rev. Dr Anderson, minister of Dornock, was received with deep regret by all who knew him. Dr Anderson's health had for years been such as to occasion him frequent anxiety, but until lately it did not interfere in any marked degree with the discharge of his duties. About five weeks ago he was prostrated by a severe illness, immediately on the close of his labours in connection with the renovation of the church, in which work he had taken a great interest. He was unable to attend the reopening service, and although he recovered sufficiently to occupy the pulpit on the following Sunday, he confined himself to giving his people a brief address and dispensing the ordinance of baptism. That proved to be his last meeting with his parishioners. Not experiencing that recovery of strength that was desirable, he went with his medical adviser, Dr M'Bean, to Carlisle yesterday week for farther professional advice. When he came home he busied himself in writing several letters, and retired to rest as usual. A little after two o'clock on Friday morning he rang his bell and expressed his belief that he was dying. In less than half-an-hour this presentiment proved to be only too correct. He breathed his last before the assistance that was sought for in the village could be obtained. Dr Anderson was a native of Blackford in Perthshire, where he was born about sixty-six years ago. He received his early education at Blackford and Muthill, and studied at St Andrews University, where he was a distinguished student. He was tutor for some time in the family of Mr Forbes of Callender House, and after acting as assistant to Rev. Mr Beveridge, Inveresk, he was ordained to the charge of Dornock in 1844. At the time of his death he was the father of his Presbytery. Dr Anderson will be best remembered in his parish for the zeal with which he discharged his pastoral duties. With kindly presence and a cheerful smile he moved freely about among his people, and none knew better than he how to impart shrewd and servicable guidance in matters of difficulty. His views of his calling were of thoroughly practical character, and therefore he paid less attention to the scholarly and thoughtful side of it. Had he done so, he could easily have left behind him no slight evidence of his acquirements and abilities. He took little part in the business of the Church courts, but where he interested himself in any matter he held his ground with great firmness and proved a formidable debater. This was more particularly the case in the straggle over the endowment and disjunction of Kirtle that took place in the Presbytery about fifteen years ago. The honour of D.D. was conferred on the deceased divine by his alma mater only a few months since, and the gratification its recipient felt at the distinction itself was greatly deepened by the mark of esteem and affection which was shown towards him at the same time by his parishioners. Dr Anderson's remains were interred in Dornock churchyard on Tuesday. At the manse a service conducted by Rev. Mr Gourlie, of Brydekirk, on behalf of the relatives. At the same time a public service was held in the church, which was conducted by Rev. Mr Crichton, Annan, and Rev. Mr Monilaws, Middlebie. After the service the funeral cortege moved down the avenue round the Annan road to the churchyard. There some 300 people of all classes from the village and surrounding parishes had assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to the memory of the deceased. On the coffin lid was the simple announcement - "John Anderson, aged 66."

Loss of the Schooner "Friends" of Carlisle on Robin Rigg

It is our painful duty to record the total loss of this vessel with all hands on board. The Friends sailed from Port Carlisle for Liverpool on Friday the 21st instant, laden with alabaster, with a crew of four hands. There was a stiff breeze blowing at the time from N.N.E. Towards midnight the wind veered round to the westward, blowing a complete hurricane, and in endeavouring to return up the Solway Firth, the ill-fated vessel struck upon Robin Rigg, and in a short time became a complete wreck The master of the vessel, Capt. Baxter, was highly esteemed among a wide circle of friends and acquaintance on both sides of the Border, and the sympathy expressed on the loss of so good a man is well worthy the occasion. A portion of the bulwarks and foremast have been washed ashore at Allonby but no trace of the hull of the vessel has yet been observable.

September 10th 1833 Cumberland Pacquet

On the 19th ult, while the sloop Jane, of Annan, was proceeding up the Solway to her destination, Annan Waterfront, and as John Bell, one of the crew, was unfastening the tackle which held the boat to the sloop, some of the ropes gave way, in consequence of which he was precipitated into the water. The vessel was immediately stopped in her course, and every means tried to aid the struggling mariner, but we regret to state that these efforts were in vain, and he sunk to rise no more. The deceased was a native of Annan. The boat, which went adrift at the same time, was subsequently recovered near Bowness.

June 20th 1835 Carlisle Journal

Mr Lewis Bell, farmer, Todholes, in the parish of Dornock, left Annan on Thursday evening betwixt 9 and 10 o'clock, on his way homeward, and at Watchill, within a very short distance of Annan, his horse fell, and he was precipitated to the ground with such violence, having fallen on his head, that death almost instantaneously ensued. Medical assistance, however, was immediately sent for to Annan, and Dr Johnstone was promptly in attendance, but such, of course, was of no avail. The deceased was about 42 years of age, and in all relations of life, as a husband, a father, a friend and a neighbour, he was justly esteemed.

February 18th 1882 Carlisle Express and Examiner

News has been received that Mr Robert L Bell, of Mount Mercer, Victoria, the youngest son of the late Mr Lewis Bell, Todholes, Dornock, was killed on the 7th December last by lightning. He was killed in his conveyance by the side of his wife while driving home. The reins, which dropped out of his hand, were seized by Mrs Bell and the horse went about 40 or 50 yards more, when it suddenly swerved and capsized the buggy, throwing out both the deceased and Mrs Bell. Deceased, says the Geelong Advertiser, took a prominent part in public affairs, and was an excellent and successful colonist. He was 47 years of age. The shock to Mrs Bell was inexpressibly great.

Fatal Accident in a Flour Mill

Last week a melancholy accident occurred at Bellenmount Mill, Kirkpatrick Fleming. A child about nineteen months old, named Mary Edgar, daughter of David Edgar, miller there, had been in the mill alone with an aunt; while there the father had gone to another part of the mill; on his return in about ten minutes he found the child lying on her face in the flour trough, and nearly covered with flour. On taking the child out it was quite dead. The aunt states that she took the child into the house immediately after the family left the part of the mill where they were, and did not observe it had left the house. It is supposed that the child had gone to the flour trough and been eating some flour, that the dry flour had caused it to cough, and while doing so that it had overbalanced itself and fallen among the flour and been suffocated – Dumfries Courier.

Annan Dec 6th - the tremendous hurricane of the 30th ult, whether in regard to loss of shipping and other valuable property, or what is of infinitely more value, the loss of men's lives, will be regarded by succeeding generations as the most fatally destructive of any on record. . . the sloop Isabella, Faulds, of Annan, in company with the Annan, the Crown and the Barbara, all bound for the Solway, with general cargoes, sailed from Liverpool, and being soon overtaken by the dreadful gale, were of course separated - the three latter vessels, although in tattered condition, reached the land without loss of hands, but the ill-fated Isabella was driven ashore on the Isle of Wana, on Sunday morning last, a perfect wreck, without a soul on board, and it is therefore feared that all hands perished. The crew consisted of Capt, Faulds, Andrew Irving, Wm Ewart and John Bell, all belonging to Annan, two of whom have left families to lament their untimely fate.

MANSLAUGHTER NEAR ANNAN. On Tuesday, the 29th ult, Mr. John Wylie, a respectable farmer living at "The Wylies," near Annan, went with his servant to Annan to deliver some sheep and potatoes which he had sold. Mr. Wylie sent his servant back with the cart, returning himself on foot. On his way home he came up with James Ritchie, a sailor, who resides in a cottage of his. Ritchie and he called together at the house of John Rae, of Howgill, a cattle dealer, to request payment of a balance due from Rae to Mr. Wylie on account of a recent business transaction. Rae was not in the house at the time, but being sent for came in soon afterwards, and Mr. Wylie and he got to angry words respecting this balance. Eventually Rae said if he would go to the door he (Rae) would "pay" him. The two went to the door together, and shortly after Ritchie heard the sounds of heavy blows, as he describes it, just like "felling a pig" ; and on going to the door he found Rae and his wife dragging Mr. Wylie into the house, the latter being perfectly insensible. After a time Mr. Wylie recovered his senses and walked home, a distance of about two miles. On his arriving there he said very little, but went almost immediately to bed. He died next morning. At the instigation of the Procurator Fiscal, a post mortem examination of the body was made by Dr. Scott, of Dumfries, and Dr. Edgar, of Annan. These gentlemen found the body to present a remarkably healthy appearance, but on the head were wounds made by some blunt instrument, sufficient to cause death. On the face were also wounds, such as might have been produced by kicks. Rae was apprehended and taken to Dumfries gaol, but has since been liberated on bail. Mr. Wylie was a bachelor, and well known for his hospitality. His funeral was on Saturday last, and was attended by a very large body of his brother farmers, by whom he was much respected.

March 20th 1863 Carlisle Journal

The late David Wylie, Esq., C.E.—Among our obituary notices last week was the name of this gentleman, who for many years occupied a prominent position in railway undertakings connected with this district. He was worthily associated with Mr. Robertson M.P., in the construction of the Chester, Birmingham, and Hereford Railways ; and he was likewise the originator and principal engineer of other lines, including the Kington, Tenbury and Bewdley, the Clee Hill, &c. Mr. Wylie was a good deal connected with lines in the Radnorshire and Hereford districts ; and he took an important part in local bills before parliamentary committees. He evinced great skill and judgment in laying out lines of railway, and his works were not only well, but cheaply constructed, seldom, if ever, exceeding the estimate. Mr. Wylie's talents were not, however, entirely devoted to the promotion of railways, although these necessarily occupied the greater part of his time and attention, He took a great interest in several matters affecting the well-being of this borough, including the sewerage and market questions. He also built the cattle market, under circumstances that might have deterred a less energetic or less competent engineer; and he also carried out the Wellington Waterworks. Mr. Wylie was a native of Annan, Dumfriesshire, and died in the prime of life, being only forty-five years of age. In the domestic and social relations of life he was much esteemed and beloved, being a kindly warm-hearted man, and his loss will be deeply felt. Mr. Wylie was interred in the general cemetery, on Thursday, his funeral being attended by a large number of relatives and friends. (Shrewsbury Chronicle)— Mr. Wylie was connected with this city, having married the eldest daughter of Mr. Clarke, of Meadow Terrace.

In memory of Captain Robert GEDDES son of Thomas GEDDES who was lost at sea on the wreck of the schooner Currwen of Carlisle 5th Octr 1831 aged 20 years.

November 5th 1831 Westmorland Gazette

A jolly boat belonging to the Curwen of Carlisle, Geddes, was, between a fortnight and three weeks ago, found stranded on the shore, near the mouth of Frith of Clyde; and it is said, two or three hats were also found at short distances from the boat. At any rate, the vessel, with her crew is now believed to be entirely lost, both from the boats being thus cast on shore and from the length of time which has elapsed since she sailed from Limerick for the Clyde. The Captain of the Curwen (Geddes) was a most promising young man, and remarkably well liked. He was likewise an only child, and it is, likewise, almost unnecessary to add, that his respectable parents are nearly inconsolable for their irreparable loss.

On Friday afternoon, George Irving, aged eighteen years, son of Richard Irving, seedsman and nurseryman, Annan, went to bathe in the Solway near Seafield, being accompanied by two boys. Irving, who could not swim, got beyond his depth. The boys could render him no aid, and before assistance arrived he sank and was drowned. The body was found when the tide ebbed near to the spot where the casualty occurred.

December 11th 1821 Tyne Mercury

Annan Dec 6th - the tremendous hurricane of the 30th ult, whether in regard to loss of shipping and other valuable property, or what is of infinitely more value, the loss of men's lives, will be regarded by succeeding generations as the most fatally destructive of any on record. . . the sloop Isabella, Faulds, of Annan, in company with the Annan, the Crown and the Barbara, all bound for the Solway, with general cargoes, sailed from Liverpool, and being soon overtaken by the dreadful gale, were of course separated - the three latter vessels, although in tattered condition, reached the land without loss of hands, but the ill-fated Isabella was driven ashore on the Isle of Wana, on Sunday morning last, a perfect wreck, without a soul on board, and it is therefore feared that all hands perished. The crew consisted of Capt, Faulds, Andrew Irving, Wm Ewart and John Bell, all belonging to Annan, two of whom have left families to lament their untimely fate.

June 25th 1859 Carlisle Patriot

Our respected neighbour, Mr Wm Irving, tacksman of Lord Mansfield's salmon fishings in Dornock parish, died very suddenly on Monday morning last. He left his home at Dornock Brow at one o'clock in the morning, for the purpose of closing his nets, apparently in his usual state of health. He had not proceeded along the shore more than three-fourths of a mile, when he all at once complained of being ill. He was assisted home by one of his sons and a servant, who accompanied him, but when he reached home he was unable to speak and died almost immediately afterwards. Disease of the heart is the supposed cause of his death.

At Dornock a sad accident occurred. Among others, a lad of the name of Kelly happened to be abroad during the storm. A few moments before his death he was conversing with a neighbour woman on the state of the elements, little dreaming that his end was so near. Just as the other left him, a vivid flash of lightning, preceded a long and appalling peal; and when the woman, stunned, and even hurt, turned instinctively round and looked after the lad, she beheld him lying motionless at a little distance. Report says, the lad was shifting the tether of a cow, and that the iron dibble had attracted the lightning.

(Conservative), to the Judicial Bench ; and, there being no opposition offered, Mr. Keswick was declared duly elected. Mr. William Keswick, of Eastwick Park, Great Bookham, near Leatherhead, is the eldest surviving son of Mr. Thomas Keswick, of Beechgrove, Dumfriesshire. He was born in 1854, was educated at private schools, is engaged in business as a China merchant, and is a member of the firm of Matheson and Co., of 3. Lombard-street. He is a Director of the Indo-China Steam Navigation Company, and Chairman of the Imperial Bank of Persia. He has a thorough knowledge of Chinese affairs, based on a long experience in that country, where he resided for thirty years. During his stay in the East he was a member of the Legislative Council of Hong-Kong, and as Consul and Consul General represented several foreign Powers in that Colony. In 1883 he paid another visit to the Celestial Empire, and remained there three years. He is a Magistrate for Surrey, sitting at the Epsom Petty Sessional Division, and a Deputy Lieutenant, in 1397 serving the office of High Sheriff, and he is Lord of the Manor of Great Bookham. He has been twice married. Mr. Keswick is the sixty-eighth new member returned since the General Election of 1895, his return making no difference in the balance of political parties.

DEATH OF A SCOTTISH COMMERCIAL GENTLEMAN. The death occurred this morning of Mr John J. J. Keswick, Dormont, a well-known county gentleman. He was the son of the late Mr Keswick, Beechgrove, Annan. Early in life he was apprenticed to the widely-known firm of Eastern merchants, Jardine, Mathieson, & Co. He afterwards went out to Calcutta, and rose to a high position in the firm's service. Twenty years ago he returned to this country, and purchased the estate of Beckfoot and Sandhills, adjoining the estate of Beechgrove, which belongs to his brother William, who is M.P. for the Epsom division of Surrey. At the time of death Mr Keswick was chairman of the Rio Tinto and several other companies. He was 61 years of age.

HE LATE MR J. J. KESWICK. The death is announced to have taken place at Bath on Saturday of Mr James Johnstone Keswick of Mabie, near Dumfries, and of Beechgrove, Annan. Mr Keswick, who was sixty-nine years of age, had been in indifferent health for some time. He was the youngest son the late Mr Thomas Keswick, the proprietor of Beechgrove, and he received his early education at Annan Academy, and afterwards passed on to Merchiston Castle School, Edinburgh. On completing his education he proceeded China, and entered into the business of Messrs Jardine, Mathieson & Coy., merchants, and ultimately obtained a considerable interest in the business, taking an active part in the conduct of it. He also took deep interest in all questions affecting his fellow-countrymen resident in China. He retired from business about twenty years ago, and resided for a time at Halleaths, near Lochmaben, and subsequently acquired the estate of Mabie, which he purchased about ten years ago. He continued to farm the estate of Beechgrove and Howgill, Annan, and acquired some other property lying adjacent to it. He took a considerable interest in agricultural matters throughout the county, and was widely consulted on questions affecting Eastern trade. He was a member of one of the sections of the Tariff Reform Commission formed by the late Mr Joseph Chamberlain. He was a Justice of the Peace for Dumfriesshire, but he did not seek to connect himself with any of the public bodies in the district. He was of a most kindly and generous disposition, and possessed a courteous and affable manner, while as a landlord he was held in high regard. He was a member of the Dumfriesshire Hunt, and at one time took active interest in it, keeping a good stud of horses and a number of excellent dogs. At one time he ran a few horses at the principal Scottish meetings. He is survived by Mrs Keswick and two sons and three daughters. The eldest son, Mr Harry Gordon Keswick, is in Africa, and is at present serving with the Union Forces there; and the second son, Mr Douglas Keswick, is at home. All the daughters are married. The funeral takes place to-day from Mabie to Newabbey Churchyard.

January 24th 1867 Whitehaven News

A very striking instance of the uncertainty of life occurred at Dornock on Thursday morning, the 17th instant. Mr James McQueen, tacksman of Lord Mansfield's fishings at Dornock, was at Dumfries on Wednesday, in his usual health, and in the afternoon, on his return, called at Annan on business, returning home in the evening in his usual health, and, after partaking of supper, retired to bed. On Thursday morning he got up about eight o'clock, and sat by the kitchen fire for some time, without any complaint of being ill, but said he expected James Harkness, mason, Springfield, to breakfast, and after that they were both going to Annan on business. Until Harkness arrived, Mr M'Queen said he would lie down in bed in the room which opened from the kitchen, and he was to be called when Mr Harkness arrived. On the latter arriving, about an hour and a half afterwards, Miss Grace M'Queen, sister of Mr M'Queen, went and called her brother, but receiving no answer, went to the bedside and found him dead. Dr Ewart, Annan, examined the body and said that death had been caused by disease of the heart; and that death must have taken place shortly after deceased lay down. Mr M'Queen was about 40 years and unmarried (Dumfries Standard) - Mr M'Queen was lately lessee of the fisheries of the Carlisle Corporation in the river Eden.

Fatal Boat Accident - A melancholy boat accident took place in the Bay of Luce on Tuesday. Mr Alexander Roxburgh, grocer; Mr Patrick M'Queen, salmon-fisher; and Mr Terrace Nish, coal-agent, accompanied by a young son of Mr M'Queen's, left Glenluce for a day's fishing and wild-fowl shooting. All went well, and the party proceeded to near Gillespie, on the shore of the Bay of Luce. They were there joined by Mr J. Nicholl, game-watcher, Castle of Park, and a young lad named John Horner. M'Queen's son, having become ill, went ashore. The boat proceeded on its homeward journey, but suddenly capsized, and the five occupants were thrown into the water. Mr Nish was never seen, and Mr Roxburgh was drowned after a short struggle. Mr M'Queen kept himself afloat for some time with the aid of a spar, but he sank before help reached him. Nicholl and the lad Horner seized the boat, and managing to retain their hold, were ultimately rescued from their position. All the three men who met with such an untimely end occupied good positions in the village of Glenluce, and were held in much esteem. Mr Nish was unmarried. Mr Roxburgh was a widower, but leaves no family. Mr M'Queen leaves a wife and nine of a family, for whom, as well as for his aged father, Mr Thomas M'Queen, Dornock Fishery, Annan, much sympathy is felt.

December 27th 1882 Eskdale and Liddesdale Advertiser

At the ripe old age of eighty-eight, there passed away, on Wednesday morning, Mr Thomas M'Queen, tacksman of the Dornock salmon fishery. He had been confined for ten years to his room—for seven of them to his bed—yet he continued to display remarkable vitality, and until Saturday there was little sign that the end was very near. On Sunday morning he had an attack of epilepsy, which was renewed on Monday, and after that he gradually sank. Mr M'Queen was a man of strong individuality of character. A native of the parish of Middlebie, and receiving his education at Gair School, he forced his way to the front, and became engaged in the course of his life in very extensive enterprises. He commenced his career as an indentured apprentice to the company that tenanted the Newbie fishings about 1810, and in 1823 he became tacksman of one of the fishings in the Firth of Forth. Here he continued to carry on fishing until 1863, when the stakenets were swept out of the estuary by the Salmon Fisheries Act of the previous year. For several years the whole of the fishings on the south side of the firth were in his occupancy, and while giving to them his own personal superintendence, he rented fishings in other parts of Scotland—in the Moray Firth, on the west coast at Oban and Gourrock, Wigtownshire, and in the Solway—in which his sons were placed as managers. While residing at South Queensferry he also carried on extensive lime-works. Mr M'Queen's calling naturally led him to take a great interest in all matters relating to salmon fishing. He made himself familiar with all the titles upon which the fishery rights in Scotland were held, and by virtue of his researches he was enabled to render valuable service to the Crown in the settlement of the question regarding the right of the Crown to the fisheries on the foreshores. Indeed, he was, we understand, the first to draw the attention of the authorities to the subject. From similar investigations he was enabled to assist the Crown in the assertion of their legal rights over the ancient palaces of Dunoon, Dunfermline and Linlithgow. The right of oyster fishing in the Forth was also a matter in which he interested himself, and he was instrumental in causing the late Lord Rosebery to relinquish any claim he had to it in favour of the Crown. In all the legislation respecting salmon fishing that had taken place since 1841, Mr M'Queen's influence had been more or less felt. He was generally the first to sound the note of alarm where legal or chartered fishing rights were endangered by the insidious proposals that have so frequently and abortively found a place in salmon fishery bills. He was fluent of speech, and a ready writer, and he rested neither his tongue nor his pen until he had done his utmost to remove the hidden dangers which his quick intellect discovered. He took a special delight in genealogical lore, and there were few Scottish families with whose history he was not acquainted. Mr M'Queen had a large family—six sons and several daughters. His sons, who all took part in his fishery enterprises, have predeceased him, excepting Mr Robert C. M'Queen who of late years has been with his father.

June 20th 1818 Carlisle Journal

At Greenhill, parish of Ruthwell, Dumfriesshire, Andrew Rome, in the 76th year of his age. This old man, with his brother who still survives, and is about ten years older, is among the last of a daring and enterprising race of smugglers, who carried on an extensive contraband trade in Annandale, before the exclusive privileges of the Isle of Man were bought up and regulated by Government. The character of this old smuggler was strongly marked with the peculiar features of his illicit occupation, and would have formed a fine subject for the graphic pen of the author of 'Guy Mannering'.

Carlisle Patriot of July 4th 1818.

To the Editor of the Carlisle Patriot

Sir

. . . I was applied to by the relatives and family of the late Mr Andrew Rome, farmer in Greenhill of Ruthwell, to contradict an account which appeared of him in the obituary of the Dumfries and Galloway Courier.

The deceased is there represented as among the last survivors of a large company or band of smugglers who carried on their illicit trade before the sovereignty of the Isle of Man was purchased by the Crown; I am desired to say that in all this there is not a syllable of truth. The sovereignty of the Isle of Man was purchased in 1764, when Andrew Rome was only twenty-one years of age; he married the preceding year but never was in any shape connected as a partner with any of the great smuggling companies on either side of the border. When he was twenty five years of age, he went to Ruthwell and took possession of a large farm on the Earl of Mansfield's estate, which his eldest brother, who was then a licensed wholesale spirit merchant, had taken from that nobleman.

The other brother alluded to in the Dumfries paper took at the same time another large farm for himself in the same parish, and from that time forward their smuggling was at an end, or at least was comparatively trifling indeed; therefore the deceased could have only acquired the peculiar habits of the old smugglers, which it seems stuck to him with so much inveteracy when he was a boy or a beardless youth; but the writer of such a description of his manners must be totally ignorant of the peculiar features which distinguish the ancient race of border smugglers, and which bear very little similitude to Mr Rome's character, and none to his habits. The ancient smugglers, to boundless daring, added great coolness, craft and cunning - their manners close, silent and reserved, were distinguished by sullen ferocity. Rome, who was in reality a rough keen sportsman of the old Scotch breed, was open, talkative, artless and generous, rash, violent, impetuous, and sometimes boisterous. He delighted in ranging the moors with his gun, and following the hounds in a fox chase - in curling upon the ice - in matching horses to run or in betting in a cockpit.

As he was independent in his circumstances, the general respectability of his character, the careless freedom of his language, the openness of his temper and his fondness for the sports of the field, attracted the notice and kindness of the principal gentleman in the neighbourhood, with whom he hunted the fox until three years ago. The Noblemen and Gentlemen of the Caledonian Hunt delighted to see the old man display the features of a race of native sportsmen now nearly distinct in the country. I have only to add, that he uniformly employed his influence with the great, which at one period in his life was not inconsiderable, for humane and charitable purposes.

The family and relatives of the deceased, attribute the composition of this obnoxious article to a gentleman who had the amplest opportunity of obtaining the fullest information, if he had thought proper to apply for it, which, in their opinion, makes his conduct more reprehensible and leaves him without an excuse for displaying his talents at the expense of wounding the feelings of so many people of irreproachable and respectable characters. - A.M .

February 13th 1885 Annandale Observer

By the death of Mr William Rome, cabinet-maker, yesterday morning, Annan was deprived of its oldest inhabitant. Mr Rome was in his 93rd year. During the active part of his life he was a prominent tradesman in the town. He learned his trade with his father, who carried on business at Langlands, in the parish of Dornock - that place being at one time a village of some importance. The late Mr Rome moved into Annan, where he was an active worker until about twenty years ago, when, having passed the allotted span of existence, he thought it time to lay aside his tools. The remaining years he has spent in well-earned retirement, enjoying, on the whole, a remarkable degree of health. Up till very lately his lithe figure was often seen pacing our streets and roads with a springy step marvellous at his years. Mr Rome's workmanship used to be of the best and most substantial character. Occasionally he made heavy purchases of mahogany and other valuable woods, and generally he came out of these enterprises with success.

April 3rd 1819 Carlisle Journal

On Sunday morning last, the corpse of a man was found near the pier head, Liverpool, which on inspection proved to be the remains of Mr David Rome, cabinet-maker of that place. It is supposed he had fallen over one of the quays the preceding night.

He was a native of Longlands, near Annan, and has left a widow and family to lament his loss.

Loss of the Robert of Port Carlisle

We noticed last week the wreck of this vessel, and we have since heard that the Robert was from 80 to 100 tons burden and had proceeded from this port to Beaumaris in ballast for slates. She left Port Carlisle on Saturday the 2nd inst and the next morning was seen to be in distress by the John Campbell which was making for Liverpool, but immediately proceeded to assist the sinking vessel. As it approached the Robert capsized, and three men were seen waving their hands for assistance, but before the John Campbell could reach them the vessel sunk and the captain and crew were lost. Captain Tristram Rome was greatly respected and has left a widow and only daughter at Port Carlisle to lament his loss.

March 12th 1861 Greenock Advertiser

The beautiful clipper barque Margaretta, Scott master, belonging to Messrs Baine & Johnston, sailed from St John's, Newfoundland, on 5th December last, for Pernambuco, with a cargo of fish, and has, regret to say, not since been heard of. When the last mail left, she had been 72 days at sea, and as thirty days is an ordinary passage, there is every fear that she foundered in a hurricane which set in upon 10th December, and was experienced by the brig James Stewart of this port, which was in company. It lasted twenty-four hours, during considerable part of which the James Stewart lay with her lee rail under water, lost bulwarks and rails on the starboard and port sides, carried away mainboom, split trysail, and received other damage. The Margaretta was commanded by Captain James Scott, a native of Annan, and the following were her crew :—James Milligan, Irvine, aged 25, mate ; David Birrell, Kirkcaldy, 22, second mate ; Archibald Adam, Greenock, 28, steward ; John Black, Cumberland, 47, able seaman ; John Drennan, Donaghadee, 22, do. ; Thomas Smith, Antrim, 17, ordinary do. ; David Stewart, Ayr, 16, do. ; and James M'Fee, do. The Margaretta, which was a very fast sailer, was built of wood in 1858, by Messrs Robert Steele & Co., was classed 13 years A 1 at Lloyds. She registered 214 tons

We are sorry to state that there is too much reason to apprehend the loss of the new vessel lately launched at Carlisle "The City" Capt. Scott, on her first voyage. She sailed from Dublin for Glasgow, with barley on the 21st ult., and she has not since been heard of; she therefore most probably foundered at sea, in one of the gales which prevailed at the latter end of December, and all on board must have found a watery grave. The hands consisted of F Scott, master, - Dixon, mate, and George Ferguson, of Annan; John Richmond of Maryport; James M'Gregor, apprentice, from Annan.

At the Buck Hotel, Annan, on the 22nd inst, of congestion of the lungs, John Williamson, chemist, aged 37 years.

January 13th 1888 Annandale Observer

THE LATE DR WILLIAMSON. We have the painful duty to-day of recording the death of Dr Williamson, which occurred on Wednesday morning. He was going about so lately as last Thursday night, but he was subsequently confined to the house by a cold, which developed into a fatal attack of inflammation of the lungs. The deceased gentleman was seventy-six years of age, and consequently he was among the oldest of the veterans who are yet spared to us. His father and mother both belonged to families that held prominent positions in the burgh in their day. "The Doctor," as he was familiarly called, has himself at times filled a considerable space in the public eye during the fifty years and more that have elapsed since he began to practice in his native town. He sat for several times in the Town Council, and often interested himself in public movements. In fishing questions especially did he come to the front. It cannot be said, however, that he exercised an active influence on the course of events. His habit of mind was apt to lead him to look at matters from a different standpoint from what other people looked at them. The consequence was that his views and suggestions were generally too ingenious and far-reaching to be carried out in practice. We have known many a dry subject rendered interesting by the peculiar and unexpected light which the subject of our notice could throw upon it. This faculty was of great value to him when, as a raconteur, he whiled away the leisure moments of his friends with stories of Annan and the people who peopled it in his youth, or with out-of-the-way excursions into various by-paths of thought and knowledge. The same ingenuity of mind caused him to take great delight at election times, in out-flanking his opponents by dexterously masked movements. On the bowling-green too, on which in later years, much of his time was spent, the game he played had always a special interest imparted to it by the same original methods. In the practice of his profession, Doctor Williamson delighted to fill the role of the old-fashioned family doctor, and many poor families there are who will have a warm remembrance of his kindly and homely ways, of which he gave them the benefit at little cost to themselves. For the last ten years, however, he has not practised much. His remains are to be interred tomorrow in Dornock Churchyard, in which parish his family have long held a patrimonial interest.

REMARKABLE STORY - the following very remarkable circumstance has been communicated to us by a correspondent, who has nothing credulous or gossiping in his nature, and who, from the numerous inquiries he has made on the subject, is willing and able to instruct its accuracy.

In the year 1796 or 7 the late Mr. John Wylie of Wylies, parish of Dornock, paid a visit to a friend on the English side of the Solway Frith, and while returning home attempted to cross by a well-known ford, about mile or so to the eastward of Bowness. He travelled on horseback, was well mounted, and knew the time precisely of low water; but an intense frost lay on flood and field, and in the course of a very few hours the process of crystallisation had gone forward so rapidly that the ice, which deeply incusted the sandbanks and crackled under his horse's hoofs, stretched even as far into the middle of the frith. With much difficulty he groped his way through the river Eden, and on reaching the Esk the air became so cold and the atmosphere so hazy, that his senses were not a little bewildered. His gallant steed, unlike his wont, evinced great reluctance to proceed, and though admonished by both whip and spur went forward at a very lagging pace. This to the rider seemed an ominous circumstance, and while pausing to reflect on his situation, the sagacious animal turned gently round of its own accord, and appeared much more willing to retreat than advance. This incident, trifling as it was, determined Mr. Wylie to resign himself entirely to the guidance of his horse; but he had not proceeded far in the backward route when he heard the distant sound of waters, and ascertained by more than one indication that the flood tide, unstayed and unrebuked by the host, was advancing with its usual rapidity. His situation was now perilous in the extreme. Placed in a dark night between two rivers, neither of them deep, yet sufficiently dangerous—with an ocean-tide in the rear that has over whelmed hundreds in the course of centuries, he literally knew not where to flee or to look for aid; to reach the English coast by out-galloping the tide was an utter impossibility, even if the Eden had not intervened; and after commending his soul to Divine Providence the bewildered traveller took his station on the largest and thickest sheet of ice he could find, in the hope rather than the expectation that it would haply float him to dry land. The animal proved by its trembling that it shared deeply in the fears of its master, and endangered the safety of both by its restlessness, as the wind whistled louder and louder, and the waters approached nearer and nearer, until spray and head-wave foamed and rushed and lashed around its sides. Still Mr. Wylie, who had previously dismounted, stood unmoved at the extremity of the reins, and after a brief space he not only heard the ice break up," but felt that he was fairly under weigh. The strong swell impelled the voyagers rapidly forward, but before they arrived at Tordoff Point, a distance of at least three miles, the slippery raft unfortunately separated, leaving the yeoman standing upon one fragment and his companion upon another. When the tide began to ebb, the icebergs floated in a contrary direction, and while again sailing rapidly with the stream the horse passed his master at a little distance, and neighed so loud that it was perfectly obvious he saw and recognised him. His share of the iceberg was either the largest, or, from some other cause, it floated fastest: but both at length were safely landed on the Cumberland coast, about half-way between Bowness and Cardornock, and at the distance of a quarter a mile from each other. Their meeting was necessarily a very happy one; and though they had drifted altogether above eight miles, neither had sustained the slightest injury beyond what arises from numbness and cold.

On finding his way to the nearest inn, Mr Wylie interested the owner's feelings by relating the wonderful escape he had made, and before tasting a morsel himself saw his steed rubbed down and suppered in a style that would do honour to the grooms at Kew Palace. The animal had always been a great favourite, but the above adventure tended so much to enhance his value that his master was often heard to say that no vile dog or carrion crow should ever tear the flesh from his bones. And this resolution he kept so religiously, that "Rattler" on his death, was buried at the bottom of a sunny knoll and the decent ceremony honoured with a tear as grateful as ever dropped from a human eye. Last week, the sloops Benjamin Nicholson, M'Cune, and the Sir Patrick Maxwell, Blake, both belonging to Annan, were put into Ramsey Bay, Isle of Man, on their passage from the West of Ireland to Liverpool, laden with grain. Having run short of provisions, the two masters and part of their respective crews, amounting in all to six persons, went ashore in the Benjamin Nicholson's boat to procure the stores necessary for the remainder of the voyage ; but in returning to their vessels, the boat upset, and before assistance could reach them, the two captains and a man named Wylie, belonging to the Sir Patrick Maxwell, were drowned. The three survivors supported themselves above water by clinging to the boat and a water-cask, until rescued from their perilous situation by a boat which put off to their assistance. The Sir Patrick Maxwell put into Whitehaven on Friday, in order to procure hands to supply the place of the unfortunate men who had met so melancholy a fate.
